[From the Rochester Union, September 11.]
The Drowning of O'Conner the Jumper—His Life.

We had barely time last evening to give the substance of the telegraph dispatch from Niagara Falls, announcing the death, by drowning, of Shields the jumper, who had advertised to make a leap of ninety feet on the 16th instant. We have since received further particulars of the unfortunate affair, together with something of the history of the man, whose true name is Patrick S. O'Conner.

He left his city on Saturday evening for the Falls, to make arrangements for his leap. There was little or nothing known of the man there, and some thought he would not make his appearance. He went there, however, and announced his purpose to jump from a scaffold to be erected by the river side at White's Pleasure Grounds, near where Blondin's rope was suspended. Yesterday morning he went down to the water for the purpose of ascertaining the depth, and to determine where he would erect his scaffold. He was accompanied by men who had skills there to assist him. O'Conner went out into the river and dove once or twice. He then went down into a small whirlpool and rose, but could not escape from the current which drew him down, and so he sank to rise no more. The men in boats could not reach him until the water for the purpose of his body no doubt immediately drifted into the great whirlpool and may sometime be found near the mouth of the river or on Lake Ontario. This is all that relates to his adventure at the Falls. He left his clothes and a few effects to be delivered to his friends when they appear. He has an uncle named Stephen residing at Lockport.

O'Conner was 27 years of age, and was born at Peterboro, Canada West, and his father, then the best part of his life, following, since he came to manhood, the occupation of a millwright. His father is dead, but his mother, a widow, resides at Peterboro. He was a widower, and leaves a child with his mother at Peterboro. Deceased came to this city about three months since, but does not appear to have been ever loved much. He worked a short time for Hayden & Bromley, and this is the only instance that we hear of his being employed here. About five weeks since he went to board with a family on Yonge street. He told something of his history there, and said he had a brother who was a Catholic priest in Canada. He spent much of his time reading, and announced his purpose to go through college and attain a thorough education. The member of the family where he boarded, to whom he disclosed his intention to make a leap, advised him to desist, but O'Conner said he intended to apply the proceeds of his exhibition of daring to the object he had avowed of obtaining an education.

He took the name of Shields for this occasion, as his relatives were respectable, and he did not want to give them an unfavorable notoriety, and then he could cast off the name at pleasure and be known no more to the world as a jumper. One day last week he went to the city, and crossed the bridge into the river, and the water being very shallow, he injured one of his feet by the experiment. The descent there was about thirty feet, we suppose.

We expressed yesterday the conviction that this man was not in sound mind. Conversation had with others since has confirmed that impression, although the people where he boarded regarded him as only an eccentric individual. The first move he made toward self-destruction by jumping, so far as we can learn, was three weeks or more ago, when he proposed to Mr. Hotchkiss, the lessee of Falls Field, to perform the feat at Genesee Falls. Mr. Hotchkiss refused to have anything to do with the matter, and advised O'Conner to abandon the foolish idea. When he told him his life would be sacrificed the man replied that he was not exactly right in mind. He appeared to be entirely indifferent as to the result of the attempt, and even proposed to jump off the Falls at once to satisfy Mr. Hotchkiss that he could perform the feat. Finally he proposed to let Mr. Hotchkiss take three-fourths of the receipts of the field in case he would assist him to make the leap in public.

Finding all attempts to operate with Mr. Hotchkiss assistance useless, he turned his attention to Niagara Falls. But, without making any definite arrangement there, he went to the job office of the Union and Advertiser, and ordered a handbill, the same that is now posted. It is headed "Miracles will never cease," and sets forth that "Shields, the renowned jumper," will leap from a scaffold, at Niagara Falls, on the 16th, swim to the shore, keep his head above water, and make a leap of ninety feet in mid-air. He prepared an advertisement for the paper, which was inserted once, without the knowledge of those having charge of the business, and then discontinued, to the dissatisfaction of the patron. We referred to this man in our last week, expressed the hope that he would not make the attempt he contemplated. And we told him, when he called upon us, just what we thought, and it was of no use. His advice had no apparent effect to move him from his purpose. We never saw him but once, and that was on the day our last notice of him appeared.

The poor fellow has prematurely found his end, and though he struggled desperately, we are told, to save the life which he had pronounced of so little value, his efforts were useless.

Lieut. Maury's First Marriage.

Mr. Willis, in the Home Journal, relates a curious incident in the life of Lieutenant Maury. It appears that the Lieutenant in his earlier years had visited the Pacific Islands and mastered some of the dialects of the natives. On one occasion a young princess, whose attire consisted principally of her long tresses, was sent to the ship and her father and his tribe to offer her hand to the young Lieutenant. In order to pay due respect to this friendly offer, the commander of the vessel ordered young Maury to proceed with the dusky damsel in a boat to shore, to make every assurance of amity between the United States and Europe, and to accompany the princess if he could, but on no account to make any objection to the marriage. Maury, as would lead to a misunderstanding, Maury, with the princess, proceeded to land in a small boat, the lady leaping out before they reached the island and swimming to the shore. After some hesitation, Maury, on landing, left the boat and proceeded to the chief's bungalow.

"It was some little distance inland, and on arriving he found he was considerably expected. There was every appearance of a grand reception, the tables spread for a royal banquet, and the fruits and drinks in abundant profusion. The chiefs were already in a state of excitement, which precluded all explanation or modification of plans. There was nothing to do but to wait circumstances. He must marry (as the Owyhee and she) to keep the peace and protect the commerce of the nation.

"The delays were apparently considerable. In a very short time, the runaway bride appeared, dressed in all manner of Pacific ornaments, and attended by her mother and a bevy of sister islandresses. The ceremony was not expected, or not missed; the ceremony was performed (what there was of it) with only native witnesses, and 'things proceeded as usual.'

"After the nuptial feast, the ship was anchored at the same island, and Prince Maury, of course, had a nice opportunity to become acquainted with the manners and customs. His copper colored papa proved very gentlemanly, and, as long as he stayed, he was most affectionately treated."

"Mr. Boutwell, a lecturer, who has been enlightening the people in Cincinnati, gives the two Napoleons an important prominence in the world's history. He prophesies the establishment among the Latin nations of an empire like that of Charlemagne, and the upholding of the Papacy as a means to that end. The danger to Protestantism and to the liberties of the world is stated to be great, but, as Napoleon the First, the 'Seventh King' told us, in Napoleon the Third would the eighth king fall, and with him Papacy. The immense military power of France, the weakness of England, the baffled coalition of Russia, and checking of Austria, were pointed out as evidences of the destined growth of a Latin power, composed of the Catholic States and under the leadership of France. The total subversion of this empire was predicted by the preacher, and a war threatened which might even involve America. After this we heard the nerve the end.

Biography of a Terrible Scoundrel—The Tiger of Africa.

A letter from Mexico to the New Orleans Crescent says:

Manuel Lozada was born in the town of Tepic, and early gave evidence of the depravity which has since made him a terror. His first act of barbarity after being expelled from his native town for his manifold villainies, was to organize a party of bandits, and at the head of them he one day captured the chief of the water police, and with him and a lot of the way house, he ordered him to be thrown down and bound severely. Then taking a knife, he scarified the Governor's feet until the soles were penetrated in a dozen places to the bone. In this condition he was forced to dance before Lozada, and when he flagged, his torturer would urge him on by picking him up with a sharp sword. Then he hung him up by the feet until he was dead, after which the body was hewn to pieces and thrown to the dogs. Rolling away from the scene of his cruelty, he called at the house of a widow woman, and because she shut the door when he brandished his bloody sword, he burst into the house, and ran her through the body. His next act of ferocity was committed at the farm called 'Magaritas,' when he burned down the houses, killed eleven persons, and violated three girls, one of them the daughter of the overseer. This last named person was called on and made to deliver all the valuables about the place, which he was to carry to the edge of the wood. This done, Lozada actually had the poor fellow seized, and then scarified his feet so that he could not walk. The child belonged to the brother of Don Carlos Rivas, who is now Lozada's military chief. His hand augmented the cruelty of the deed, and this large San Antonio, which contained three thousand inhabitants. When he surprised the town, the people fled, with the exception of a few men who made a stand in a strongly built house, and who at last succeeded in driving all the robbers out.

The whole district of Tepic became alarmed, and the terror was not decreased when a few days later he attacked the village of Rosca Nevada on the border of the State of Jalisco, when he burned all the houses, and did not cease to destroy the people until all were fled to the mountains. Gen. Blanco was at that time Governor of Sonora, but he made no movement to arrest the bandits. San Blas was twice visited by the robber, and the inhabitants only saved themselves by flight to the ships in the harbor. At last the public anger could stand no longer, and a force of three hundred men was sent to put an end to the confusion and robbery. Col. Leras, his commander, attacked the mountain stronghold of Lozada, and counted himself victorious because he took eleven of the robbers prisoners. Lozada fled, but immediately after recruited his force to one hundred and fifty men, and threatened Tepic with his twelve thousand soldiers.

The citizens, scared in every direction. All classes took arms, and a force of two thousand men took the field. They had no flag, for at that time the republic was struggling between the Church and the Liberal, and the Liberal had just run away. Jalisco pronounced in favor of Juarez, and Tepic, in its extremity of danger from the thieves, defied the Liberal banner. Lozada, almost caught in the coils, repelled the Conservatives, hung on to the Liberal, and then, when he saw the soldiers of the nation. He is known as 'The Tiger of Africa,' and his reputation has not improved since he naturalized himself. He is now a chief of police in the capital, under the command of Gen. Lagarde.

Death of Col. John Duval.

Col. John Duval died at Stamping Ground, on the 7th inst., in the 77th year of his age. He was born in Prince George's county, Maryland, and with his father emigrated to Kentucky in 1789. He settled in Scott county in 1793, where he resided up to the time of his death, embracing a period of over 65 years. In the late war with Great Britain he was Captain and commanded a company of Kentucky militia; served a campaign under General Harrison, on the northwestern frontier in 1813, and participated in the dangers and sufferings of the siege of Fort Meigs. Col. Duval represented Scott in the Kentucky Legislature in 1827-8, besides having filled various other civil offices. The discharge of his public duties was always marked by the strictest integrity and fidelity. He was always a firm believer in the Christian religion; manifesting the greatest respect for its institutions and observances, but made no profession of religion and a few months prior to his death, when he attacked himself to the Christian or Reformed Church. He lived an active, temperate life, and enjoyed uninterrupted good health up to the moment that he was stricken with the fatal paralysis.

He was a man of vigorous mind; fond of reading, and kept himself well informed upon all subjects of practical interest. He was remarkable for his practical objectment, and gentleness of manner. Although devoted to his principles and zealous in maintaining them, he was careful never to say a word that was offensive to those who differed with him. Few men had secured more universally the esteem of all who knew him. It may be said, with literal truth, that he died without an enemy.

"The Cleveland Plaindealer does not believe in the reported 'power of the human eye,' and it gives as the reason of its disbelief an incident which occurred at a Southern hotel a short time since. Here Driesbach, the famous 'Pon tamer,' was at the hotel; and one night a very powerful and savage drunken man was terrifying every person in the bar room. Herr Driesbach volunteered 'to get an eye on him and his limp,' and crowding himself in front of the infuriated rowdy, he fastened his terrible eye upon him. The fellow, who was toward the latter, putting his hands upon his knees, and returning the gaze as well as he could in his then confused state. The tamer thought things were working and intimating as much by a nod of his head to the crowd, when the subject asked in a calm dissipated manner, 'what he was looking at.' 'Never your mind,' said the tamer, throwing all the power he could muster into his eyes, but the subject did mind for with a startling 'who-ee,' he dealt the tamer a tremendous blow under the left ear which sent him through a glass door into the next room, where he came to a sudden stop against a hard brick partition. He was carried up stairs and down in a caphorn and old rags. In a few days he was able to be out, but he has never since tried the eye power upon a drunken man.

"A top of a fellow, who was sauntering about a country village, saw a pretty face at the window of a house near which a little boy was at play. 'Who is that girl?' he asked, looking out. 'Sis,' said the boy, the laconic reply. 'Will you tell me if she is a maid or a matron?' asked the exquisite. 'She's a tailress,' answered the lad, resuming his play.

An Extraordinary State of Affairs in Louisiana.

The Vermillionville (Lafayette) Echo, of the 10th, has the following account of the breaking up of a nest of desperadoes:

About ten days ago the Vigilance Committee of this parish were informed that a powerful and well organized company of desperadoes, headed by an individual named John Jones, or John Baptiste Chasson, and supposed to number about three hundred men, were within about 20 miles of this place, and prepared to give the Vigilants battle. The committees of St. Martin, Vermillion, St. Landry, and Calcasieu, were immediately apprised of the fact, and on Saturday morning, the 3d inst., each was promptly at the place previously agreed upon as rendezvous. After the necessary arrangements had been made, the Vigilants, numbering about 500 men, took up their line of march for the place where it was known the enemy were to be found. As they marched a covey, two or three men were taken prisoners, all armed with loaded guns, which they said they carried with them to shoot birds, but on drawing the charges from their guns, they were found to contain bullets instead of shot.

About 10 o'clock the vigilants came in sight of the house of one Emilian Lagrange, where the desperadoes had fortified themselves—cutting holes in the walls of the dwelling and all the out-houses, through which they intended to fire on their enemies. When the committees got within a short distance of the fortifications they halted and prepared to batter the buildings down, having with them a piece of cannon; but just then they learned that there were several women and children in the dwelling house, which caused them to hesitate about firing, not wishing to harm them.

As soon as the belligents saw the cannon pointed towards them they became greatly confused, and the whole number left their forts, and part of them ran off into the woods, pursued by a company of the vigilants, who overtook and captured some of them. The balance remained near the house, but made no show of resistance. A detachment of four men went to order their instant surrender, which they promptly did, all coming and delivering up their arms. Seventy-one were taken prisoners, and the rest were sent to about an equal number to make good their escape. Their flag and fifty-three double-barreled guns fell into the hands of the vigilants, together with a number of pistols and knives.

One of the leaders of the desperadoes, finding that all was lost, shot himself through the head with his revolver, thereby putting an end with his own hands to his worthless life. This, so far as we could learn, was the last of the desperadoes, as soon as everything was quiet, a regular trial was gone into on the spot, and the whole number were condemned to receive the lash, and given five days to leave the State, under penalty of being hung if caught after the expiration of that time.

There is not the least doubt that a few of the unfortunate wretches above mentioned were misled by some of the desperadoes, who had been deceived into believing that the Governor had ordered them, in his proclamation, to oppose the Vigilants, and that, too, with arms in their hands; but most of them were there for some mean, and really purpose. More than two thirds of those captured had never in any way been molested by the committees.

From the disclosures made by some of the desperadoes, it is evident that they had been deceived by some of the committees, who would have excited the negroes to revolt, and God only knows what the consequences would be.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—The city government of Portland, Me., at a meeting last Friday evening, made arrangements for a suitable demonstration on the occasion of the arrival of the Great Eastern. The programme includes a public dinner, ball, general illumination of the city, ringing of the bells, salutes of artillery, excursions in the harbor, military display, and other manifestations. It was also voted to extend invitations to the President of the United States and his Cabinet, to Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott, to the Governors of the several States in the Union, to the Gov. From South.

Boston, September 16.—The correspondent of the Traveller, writing from Camp Floyd, under date of August 18th, describes the assassination of First Sergeant Ralph Pike, of the tenth infantry, who was shot in front of the Salt Lake Hotel by a woman named Spencer. The murderess had escaped. Pike's funeral was attended by three regiments of infantry, the officers of each regiment being in full uniform, by order of General Johnston. Several other assassinations are charged on Mormons, and great excitement exists.

Official information from Utah states that the troops are principally employed in protecting the overland emigrants from Indian attacks. The President has recognized France August Hirsch as consul to the Kingdom of Hanover at Boston.

Democratic Nominations.

Worcester, Sept. 16.—The Democratic Convention nominated Gen. Benj. S. Butler, of Lowell, for Governor, and Stephen O. Bonis, of Springfield, for Lieutenant Governor. The following nominations were also made: Secretary of State, Samuel W. Bowen, of Adams; Treasurer, George Demasset, Auditor, James E. Esterline, of Worcester; Attorney General, D. H. Mason, of Dedham; Chief Cashier, Isaac Davis, of Oliver Stevens, and James S. Whitney are chosen delegates to the Charleston Convention. It is said that all favor the claims of Senator Douglas for the Presidency. The resolutions adopted recognize the principle of popular sovereignty, though indorsing the present administration.

POWDER MILL BLOWN UP.—MAN PROBABLY

KILLED.—One of the wheel mills of the Cleveland Powder Company, blew up about ten o'clock this morning, injuring one man severely. The mill had ceased operation a short time before, and the injured man was in the act of changing the charge, consisting of one hundred and fifty pounds of powder. Damage from two to three hundred dollars, which will be repaired in a few days. The other mills are in operation. Cleveland Herald, 14th.

ANTHROPY OF THE SUN-STROKE.—Perhaps there is not a reader of newspapers in the United States, who is aware of the fact that the comp de soleil, or sun-stroke, was known as far back as the age of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, that is, in the beginning of the sixth century, B. C.

The truth of this statement will be found in the 3d verse of the 8th chapter of the Apocryphal book of Judith, in the Bible, which relates the death of that beautiful Hebrew woman's husband, Manasseh. It reads thus: "For as he (Manasseh) stood overseeing that bound slaves in the field, the heat came upon his head and he fell on his bed and died."

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE AT ROME.—Under the direction of the Propaganda works are going on with great activity in the Convent of the Umitta, in Rome, to prepare it for a college. The great building (situated at the foot of the Quirinal, toward the Corso) has been bought for $48,000, and is destined as a college for North American and ecclesiastical students. The Bishops of the United States, who are about fifty in number, have recently sent three thousand dollars to the Propaganda for the necessary works; and before the end of this year the place will be arranged, and will be able to receive one hundred students. The French College has lately rebuilt the Church at St. Chiara, and by the side of it a large establishment contains sixty students. Spain has begun work for a national ecclesiastical seminary. The South American College opened last year with thirty-five students.

SUSPENSION OF PHILLIPS, SAMSON & Co.—The Boston Transcript says:

The announcement on Saturday afternoon that Phillips, Sampson & Co. had suspended payment, was received with general regret in the community. The leading members of the firm have died within a few months, and the survivor declined it best, under the embarrassing circumstances in which he was placed, to suspend. The Boston Journal is assured that the Atlantic Monthly is not only paid its expenses, but a very handsome profit over its cost. The suspension grew out of unfortunate circumstances, well known to his trade, which produced a lack of confidence in the stability of the house.

A negro woman in New Orleans has been arrested charged with torturing a white boy in a most horrible manner. His father was a respectable French mechanic, and died about a year ago, when owing to his mother, an habitual drunkard, being imprisoned as a vagrant, he was taken charge of by Maria. When found the boy was chained up with an iron chain around his neck, and he lay in a filthy, cold, and dark room, in contact with the chain, and his body literally black and blue from the beating he received. He stated that he had been chained up in this manner for three days, frequently having his mouth crammed full of cotton to prevent his making any noise.

ARREST.—Wednesday afternoon one of the "fingered gentles" put his hand into the pocket of a Mr. V. and abstracted from thence a pocket-book. But the fellow's touch was not delicate enough to prevent Mr. V. from feeling his hand, and so soon as he withdrew the purse, he turned quickly and caught him. The pocketbook was examined before Judge Robertson, yesterday evening, and in default of bail was committed for trial. We would again repeat our warning to the throngs now in town to be on the lookout for the rascals who always flock to such places to exercise their voracity.

Shooting.—Yesterday evening near the Fair

Grounds, a difficulty commenced between a man named Kirkpatrick and some showmen, in which K. was struck. Somehow, a man named Miller, and several other persons, became involved in the fray, and a ball from one of the pistols fired by some of the party, struck one of the showmen in the elbow, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. We give the above as we heard it, not vouching for its correctness. The party gave bail in $100 to appear this (Friday evening.) We do not know whether the showmen gave bail or not.—*Lex. A NOBLE BUT UNFORTUNATE ACT.—A brakeman of the Galton railroad, named Timothy Rague, risked his own life and suffered the loss of one of his hands before yesterday in an attempt to rescue from death two children who foolishly tried to crawl under a car just as the train started. He succeeded in pulling the children out of the way of danger, but in so doing he crushed his left hand under a car wheel, which enabled it to atomize. Doctor Isham dressed the wound, and thinks he will be able to save a portion of the hand.—Chicago Ill. Times.

Price $7 per volume. Persons wishing a volume sent by mail may remit the price and it will be forwarded postage paid. an23 f

Destructive Fire.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 17.—The stabling attached to the U. S. Post office caught fire this morning. The stables were occupied by the horses attached to Dan Rice's circus, and a number of them were smothered. These lost, however, were mostly train horses, and his loss will not exceed $5,000. The fire originated through the carelessness of a driver, who let a lamp fall, causing it to burst and to scatter the flames among the combustible contents of the stables. The damage to the hotel was trifling.

Mr. J. G. Mathers' large sale of carpets and furniture goods is postponed until Wednesday, Sept. 28th. During the Fair week, and up to day of sale, the balance of his large stock will be arranged for inspection on the first and second floors. City and country buyers would do well to call and examine his stock. Many of his best styles of Brussels, and tapestry, and supercarpets, and rich lace goods and other articles, will be sold.—Low Jour.

We notice among the hotel arrivals Mr. Selby Harney and lady. No doubt this announcement will take Selby's numerous friends by surprise, but we can assure them that it is a solemn fact. We had noticed of late our young friend made frequent trips on the Nashville railroad, but we had no idea that they were of a matrimonial character.—Low Jour.

From Boston.

Boston, Sept. 17.—Mr. Davis and wife, of New Orleans, while crossing the track of the Worcester Railroad in a carriage yesterday, were struck by a locomotive. Mrs. Davis was thrown over a two-story building, close by, and instantly killed. Mr. Davis was severely injured.

To resuscitate a drowned Englishman, place a piece of roast beef under his nose; an Irishman, a gill of pot-stew; a Scotchman, a half-pint of whisky; a Welshman, a few leeks; a Frenchman, a pinch of snuff; a Spaniard, some fresh blood; an old maid, an offer of marriage; a Yankee, attempt to pick his pockets.

KILLED HIMSELF.—A man named Obadiah McConnell, residing at Pleasantville, in Henry county, committed suicide on Thursday night last, by swallowing laudanum. Cause as yet unknown. He was a respectable young married man, and possessed many excellent qualities of heart.

We are glad to see it stated that the health of Hon John P. Martin is improving, and confident that he will be able to resume his duties as one of the members of the best and truest Democrats in the State.—Low Jour.

The English mail steamer Julia was fired on twice from the Spanish fort at Tarifa, on the morning of the 25th of August, where her ensign was flying; at the second fire a large round shot fell about fifty yards from the steamer.

Metternich, the Austrian Ambassador, was about to leave on his way to Vienna.

Business was dull at Paris, on account of the Zurich Conference, and the rumors had declined. Spain—Accounts from Madrid state that Spain had withdrawn her Consul from Tangus, and decided to demand satisfaction of Morocco for the outrages at Ceuta. Orders had been given for the formation of an expedition, a corps of 10,000 men.

It is suggested in the London papers that the firing on the steamer Julia was for the purpose of bringing her to, in order to learn the state of affairs at Ceuta.
